DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because it contains more than 150 words. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 4-6, 14-16, and 24-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Walker et al (U.S. Patent Number: 6,018,718).

Claim 4: Walker discloses the method of claim 2, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: reducing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer came close to achieving their designated performance value. (Col 11, lines 1-11), but does not explicitly say that the performance value is based upon the payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.

Claim 5: Walker discloses the method of claim 2, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value (Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a minimum payment amount. Walker does however indicate that the extent of monthly payments is a valid criteria for performance rewards (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which a minimum payment amount was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use a minimum payment amount as the targeted performance criteria in order to provide those customers with large balances an incentive to reduce their outstanding debt and therefore reduce the companies risk exposure.

Claim 6: Walker discloses the method of claim 2, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value ((Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.

Claim 14: Walker discloses the system of claim 12, wherein the means for determining an amount of reward points further comprises: reducing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer came close to achieving their designated performance value. (Col 11, lines 1-11), but does not explicitly say that the performance value is based upon the payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.

Claim 15: Walker discloses the system of claim 12, wherein the means for determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value (Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a minimum payment amount. Walker does however indicate that the extent of monthly payments is a valid criteria for performance rewards (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which a minimum payment amount was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use a minimum payment amount as the targeted performance criteria in order to provide those customers with large balances an incentive to reduce their outstanding debt and therefore reduce the companies risk exposure.

Claim 16: Walker discloses the system of claim 12, wherein the means for determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value ((Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.

Claim 24: Walker discloses the computer-readable medium of claim 22, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: reducing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer came close to achieving their designated performance value. (Col 11, lines 1-11), but does not explicitly say that the performance value is based upon the payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.

Claim 25: Walker discloses the computer-readable medium of claim 22, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value (Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a minimum payment amount. Walker does however indicate that the extent of monthly payments is a valid criteria for performance rewards (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which a minimum payment amount was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use a minimum payment amount as the targeted performance criteria in order to provide those customers with large balances an incentive to reduce their outstanding debt and therefore reduce the companies risk exposure.

Claim 26: Walker discloses the computer-readable medium of claim 22, wherein determining an amount of reward points further comprises: increasing the amount of reward points based on a determination that the customer has exceeded their designated performance value ((Col 11, lines 11-32), but does not explicitly state that the performance value is based upon a payment due date. Walker does however indicate that the payment due date is a valid criteria for performance rewards. (Col 7, lines 61-67 and Col 8, lines 51 – 60). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to create a targeted reward system in which payment due date was the criteria on which performance was evaluated. One would have been motivated to use payment due date as the targeted performance criteria in order to create an environment in which corporate cash flow and working capital could be accurately predicted.
